POINTERS ON SELECTING INCUBATOR, FROM DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

[By Latest Mail]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Users of incubators are given the following suggestions in a new free publication of the department of agriculture entitled "Natural and Artificial Incubation of Hens' Eggs." (Farmers' Bulletin No. 685).

See that the incubator is running steadily at the desired temperature before filling with eggs. Do not add fresh eggs to a tray containing eggs which are undergoing incubation.

Turn the eggs twice daily after the second and until the nineteenth day. Cool the eggs once daily, according to the weather, from the seventh to the nineteenth day.

Turn the eggs before caring for the lamp.

Attend to the machine carefully at regular hours.

Keep the lamp and wick clean.

Test the eggs on the seventh and fourteenth days.

Do not open the machine after the eighth day until the chickens are hatched.

In setting up and operating an incubator follow the directions of the manufacturer. There are a large number of reliable American-made incubators, but the department cannot recommend any particular kind. It does advise, however, that poultry raisers select an incubator that has already given satisfaction in the vicinity where it is to be used. As the cost of the machine is small compared with the eggs it hatches, it is a good investment to get a well-constructed incubator instead of a cheap one, which requires more attention and wears out quicker. The equipment of most incubators is so subject to change that particular lamps, regulators, etc., cannot be recommended. The lamp, however, should have a bowl large enough to hold enough oil to burn 36 hours under average weather conditions; should be easy to remove and replace, should set absolutely tight in position, and be at a convenient height.

Larger incubators preferable.

An incubator holding 60 eggs calls for as much time and care as one holding 360, and for ordinary use, a machine of at least 150 egg capacity seems most satisfactory. On those large farms that use individual-lamp incubators, the machine usually holds from 300 to 400 eggs, and a small machine is sometimes used for a preliminary test, the eggs being transferred to the large incubator after the first or second test. Large machines cost less in proportion to the number of eggs they hold than smaller ones. However, smaller machines are valuable under special conditions, as for preliminary testing.

Chickens are more even in size when they are all hatched within a short time of each other than when the incubating period is extended over many weeks. Many poultrymen, therefore, believe that it pays to have an incubator large enough to hatch most of their stock in two, or at most, three hatches. Much time in tending to the incubators and brooders is saved in this way. A fair estimate for a poultry farm is to have the incubator hold as many eggs as there are hens, provided that about one-half of the flock is to be renewed yearly and no outside hatching is carried on.

Well-ventilated room needed.

A well-ventilated room, which is not subject to great variations in temperature, should be selected for the incubator. If built above ground, the wall should be double and the entire building insulated. In sections that have a mild climate, machines may be operated in buildings with single walls, but a well-insulated room is always preferable.

Where only a few small machines are used they generally run in a room or cellar of the house. Good results in hatching may be secured in cellars as well as in rooms, and these are more commonly used. Many of these cellars are provided with some system of ventilation beside windows, muslin screens on the windows often providing good ventilation without draft, and keeping the sun from shining on the machines. Cement floors are easier to keep clean than dirt floors. Where the equipment is extensive, a special cellar or house should be provided.

How to Operate a Machine.

In setting up the machine, get it perfectly level. Do not plane off the door if it sticks, until the machine has been heated up and thoroughly dried. Run the machine at about 102 deg. Fahrenheit for a day before putting in the eggs. Afterwards do not touch the regulator for several hours as it takes this time for the machine to come back to its regular temperature.

The temperature should remain nearly even. When the bulb of the thermometer rests directly on the eggs the temperature is usually held at 101½ deg. Fahrenheit the first week, 102 deg. to 109 deg. Fahrenheit the second week, and 103 deg. Fahrenheit the last week; while a hanging thermometer is operated at about 102 deg. to 102½ deg. Fahrenheit the first two weeks, and 103 deg. Fahrenheit the last week.

The eggs tend to throw off more heat as they develop, so that occasionally the regulator needs to be changed slightly, but it should not be changed any more than is absolutely necessary. The temperature of the egg chamber may be lowered by lowering the flame of the lamp in the middle of the day. Regulate the incubator before opening the door to tend to the eggs. Most operators tend to their machines two or three times daily.

Causes of Poor Hatches.

The cause of poor hatches is a much discussed question, which depends on a great variety of circumstances. A poor hatch is more apt to be due to the condition of the eggs previous to hatching than to incubation, although improper handling of either factor will produce the same results. When eggs fail to hatch, see whether the breeding stock is kept under conditions which tend to produce strong, fertile germs in the eggs. If the eggs have been handled properly before incubation, and whether the conditions were right during incubation, as judged by the time of the hatch.

A daily temperature record should be kept of each machine. The operator can thus compare the temperature at which the machines have been kept, which may prove valuable in the future work, especially if the brooder records can be checked back against those of the incubator.

Every poultry raiser who contemplates setting up an incubator is advised to write for the new bulletin, to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Among other details it has paragraphs on moisture and ventilation, testing eggs and disinfecting and strong incubators.

Displaying acting that gives no cause for criticism, with setting notably appropriate, and a real story told in photographic action, the tale of "The Burning River," which requires several thousand feet of film to produce, will be a feature at the afternoon and evening performances at the Empire theater. ## CARRANZA WOULD BE PROVISIONAL RULER OF MEXICO

Says He Holds Two-Thirds
Mexico, and Should Be Recognized By Mediators

EL PASO, Tex., June 2.—(Associated Press by Federal Wire)—General Carranza, directing head of the Constitutionalist yesterday issued a statement to the American press in which he says that the agreement of the South American mediators in regard to the Constitutionalists makes all the Constitutionalists laugh. He says the mediators have never settled the problem in their own countries.

Carranza declares that the commander-in-chief of the Constitutionalist should be the provisional president of Mexico pending the holding of an election and the restoration of peace, which he says will be within a few months if he is let alone.

Carranza wonders how the peace commissioners imagine they can force any other program on an army which is already in possession of two-thirds of Mexico and which he says will soon hold all of the country.

He declares that any concessions to Huerta are impossible and is astonished that the Constitutionalist, although they are conquerors in the present revolution, are ignored in the peace proceedings at Niagara Falls.
